

INTRODUCTION

The value of domestic production is measured by Gross Domestic Product (GDP, published quarterly), and at the state level, by Gross State Product (GSP, published annually).

The value of spending in the domestic economy is measured by Domestic Final Demand (DFD, published quarterly), and the state level, by State Final Demand (SFD, published quarterly).

SFD reflects consumption in the state on goods and services (including imports) and capital investment. It does not count the value of goods and services produced locally, but exported (overseas or interstate).

Note: Due to the impact of COVID-19 on the economy, all trend series in the National Accounts have been suspended from the March quarter 2020 onwards until further notice.
